SHORELINES By Eric Greinke

Eighteen poems that elevate river and lake water into a revelation of life as only Eric Greinke could envision:

We all love the sudden instant / when daylight steals our dreams. / You can feel your own dark heart heal, / that boat that leaks and breaks / just as you reach the distant shore. (From "In Tree Light")

Printed letterpress from handset Deepdene metal types, hand sewn and bound. Edition limited to 125 copies Signed & Numbered by the poet.
5" x 8" 25pp. $25.00

About the Author

Eric Greinke's poems and essays have been published in hundreds of American and international literary magazines since the early seventies. He is the author of twenty books, most recently Masterplan: Collaborative Poems with Allison Stone. He is currently a contributing writer for the Schulkill Valley Journal. He lives in an old stone cottage by a lake in Western Michigan.

About Adastra Press

Begun in 1979 by poet, teacher and printer Gary Metras to print and publish short collections of quality contemporary poetry using the methods and equipment of the antique book arts.
SHORELINES is Adastra's 116th title.

As long as fine literary presses continue to handcraft handsome books like these from Adastra, serious readers of the twenty-first century can rest assured, the book is alive and well. — American Book Review
